

ON RUGBIISM, BASEBALL, RAINING AND ATHLETICS

ROBERT EDGREN EDITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO newspaper which is printing biographies of various Western sporting men has the following to say of Morris Levy, the fight promoter, sometimes called "Mazuma":

"Little Mazuma showed that he had the making of a marquis in him at an early age. One day he tumbled to the fact that two of the kids at school were going to have it out in the back lot.

"If you'll fight in my cellar I'll give you a nickel," he said. The youngster didn't care where he fought so long as he fought, so agreed. Mazuma worked the same gag on the other. Then he sold tickets to the go, and with a $1.50 rate, minus the purse of 10 cents, he had the foundation of his fortune. That is how the Hayes Valley Athletic Club started."

The following letter from a fan deserves notice, if for nothing else, why then for its brevity. There's nothing else on earth a sporting editor likes so much as to see his correspondents writing short letters. When you use ten lines there is a chance to print what you have to say. It is interesting, if you write ten pages—put it into the waste basket. The space in a paper like The Evening World is too valuable to be given by the column to single contributors.

Here's the letter: Mr. Edgren, Dear Sir:— I have been reading your column every day for over two years. I want to say to you that you're a wonder. You're the authority on everything from boxing to baseball. You're the original Wise Guy. They can't hand it to you, can they? You're on to everything, so you must know by this time you big dub, that I'm handing you a line.

What I want to know is what kind of hay you eat at the brainfood joint for breakfast when you write that O'Brien is a joke beside Jeffries. I've got a clipping from your column three years old in my scrapbook saying that Jeffries is drinking wine and is getting fat, and that was three years ago. Now how do you figure it out that if Jeffries has been getting fat for three years, or maybe more, that he could put up a fight against O'Brien that everybody knows is so fat that he ran your friend Fix off his feet and then put him out with a punch that landed on the stomach?

Thank you, William, for those kind words. As for your query about the hay, I'm sorry to say that I can't help you out with information. I never have tried it as an article of diet, so I can't advise you.

Only horses really enjoy hay. William—horses and other animals with longer ears. If you need a large supply I might suggest that you turn yourself out to pasture. I had a pack mule once, on a Western hunting trip, that lived on dry pine needles; but I think you'll find green grass pleasanter to the taste. Bill and more sympathetic in color.

By the way, you forgot to inclose the number of your stable. And, William—you're getting off the trail about Jeffries. Jeffries can fight, but he doesn't care to. I tell you this for your own good, should you ever come across him: There was a time when Jeff drank wine. But now James is living across his married life, William.

The simple married life, William. Jeffries is a little fat, perhaps, but if you had seen him catch Jim Corbett and play with him in their last fight, as I did, you'd change your mind about O'Brien's ability to run him to death. In my humble opinion, William, Jeffries would only need to stand still in the middle of the ring, and our mutual friend, Phillie Jack, would bump himself to death on the posts running around and around to keep out of reach. And you can put your line in that and drink it, Billy.

Goodbye. ABE ATTELL and Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan have agreed to fight for the featherweight title, which was handed to Attell when he whipped Neil in Los Angeles.

The one knockout scored against Attell was handed him by Sullivan in the fifth round, after Sullivan had outfought and outboxed him all the way. Sullivan was, and still is, boxing instructor of the Missouri A. C., in St. Louis. The club gave him permission to go out and fight Attell before, and he has applied for a permit again. Tommy wants the featherweight title. Sullivan is a clever little fellow, weighing 130 pounds now. He wants a month to get into shape and to come down to 122 pounds at 3 P. M., which Attell has named as the weight.
